

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

We are always seeking new ways to further our professional development and regard this activity as one of the most important in our firm. As well as providing structured internal and external legal training programmes, we aim to think outside the box by providing a number of different events and activities which bring everyone together in a more relaxed and informal environment.

Every year, for example, we run a 'Family Day' where everyone including families spend a day away together in addition to a three day "Off-Site Event". We've also been involved with team cookery classes, coaching classes run by a professional organisation that traditionally helps athletes and other courses such as the 'Mini MBA for lawyers' amongst others.

Importantly, we recognise that the English language is an invaluable asset to have, therefore, employees can apply to spend time working in the London office where they can also gain good knowledge of the UK legal environment.

Ultimately, we recognise that our people form the crux of our business and consistently put in great efforts to meet the demands of our growing client base. A key objective, therefore, is to aim for a hard working yet fun environment, one which provides for a dynamic and progressive working culture.
